OVERVIEW

Hermes Netburn attorneys have the skill and experience to defend and enforce you and your business's intellectual property rights.

Your intellectual property is an extremely important and valuable part of your business. Defending and enforcing those rights require a detailed understanding of your business and products and an expertise in the law. Hermes Netburn attorneys pride themselves on their diligent understanding of our client's intellectual property and having legal skill and expertise required to defend and enforce your intellectual property rights.

Our attorneys handle a wide range of intellectual property matters including copyright, patent, trademark and trade secret issues. We handle these types of business matters from prevention, with appropriate risk assessment and management, through trial and appeal. Our litigation experience coupled with our ability to master scientific and technical issues as well as complex insurance law and insurance coverage problems make us uniquely well-qualified to address these types of business concerns.

As with all matters, Hermes Netburn is well-suited to handle intellectual property matters of any size. From small copyright infringement claims to critical patent infringement or trade secret misappropriation issues, we take an aggressive approach to early evaluation and strategy development. Our lawyers and their support staff can handle large document cases as well as cases involving multi-media and electronic storage. We team with the appropriate experts to ensure that we have sufficient mastery of the technical or unique aspects of the intellectual property at issue. Our hands-on approach from intake through appeal serves our clients, large and small, to safeguard their investments.
